

"POP" CHADWICK "STRIKES OUT"

Father of Base Ball Died Yesterday Afternoon

AT HIS BROOKLYN HOME

He Attended Opening Base Ball Game of the Season and Contracted a Cold Which Developed Rapidly Into Pneumonia.

New York, April 21.—Henry Chadwick, who is known from ocean to ocean as the "Father of Baseball," and who has been a writer and enthusiast of the American national game for more than half a century, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 840 Halsey street, Brooklyn, after a short illness.

Mr. Chadwick, who was eighty-three years old and was quite feeble, attended the opening game of the season at Washington park, Brooklyn, last Tuesday, and in his weakened condition caught a severe cold that developed into pneumonia.

Henry Chadwick, although an Englishman by birth, he having come to America with his parents when he was ten years of age, and having a natural leaning toward cricket, which he played himself, soon became deeply interested in the game of base ball, and used his pen in behalf of the sport up to the time of his death.

In addition to being a graphic writer Mr. Chadwick was the leading statistician of the game, and his records of the work of the players of the big leagues were generally accepted as authentic. He edited a baseball guide, and in addition to that work he wrote voluminously for various sporting publications. "Pop" Chadwick, as he was affectionately called by all who knew him, and no one connected with baseball, or interested in it, could fail to know the old man, was never so happy as when seated in a hall park watching the work of a team. He never failed to score the game, and while his failing eyesight compelled him frequently in latter years to ask questions of the home-eyed, still his scoring was accurate to the last.

The old man was a picturesque figure in his long white beard and bow tie, giving him a patriarchal look. He was a stickler for clean baseball, and for many years had been vigorous opponent of rowdy tactics on the field. He never failed to criticize severely any action that he regarded as detrimental to the game, and while he was a quiet, gentle man, with a preference for commendation and helpful advice, yet his criticisms always carried weight.

SAYS HUGHES WILL STUMP FOR ANTI-AGGRIEVING MAN.

The Governor, However, Declines to Discuss the Question.

Albany, April 21.—Friends of the race track bills declared yesterday that there was doubt of the fact that Governor Hughes would stump the Niagara-Olean county in the interests of the election of a Republican to succeed the late Senator Franchot. So pronounced has been this belief that the question, "Will you stump Niagara-Olean county in this senatorial election?" was put bluntly to the governor yesterday. His only reply was that "I have nothing to say whatever on that matter."

PLAYERS FINED $100 EACH.

Stahl and Donlin Then Reinstated in National Base Ball.

Cincinnati, April 21.—The National base ball commission yesterday reinstated players Garland Stahl and M. J. Donlin, but fined each $100 for having participated in certain games with clubs or against clubs harboring ineligible players in the city of Chicago during last season. Because of the questions raised, the commission gives warning that in the future national agreement players will at any time be permitted to play with or against any club harboring ineligible players.

POSSE AFTER NEGRO.

Dogs Pursue Black Wounded by Georgia Girl.

Thomasville, Ga., April 21.—A posse with bloodhounds is searching for the negro who fired at Miss Ellen Quarterman, the 15-year-old daughter of a local merchant, Sunday, and who was in turn wounded by her.

Miss Quarterman was alone when the negro entered the house and seized her. The girl broke away, ran into an adjoining room, got a repeating shotgun and opened fire on the negro.

The negro fled from the house, but stopped when he reached the yard and returned the girl's fire with a pistol. He fired three times, the bullets going through the girl's dress.

The negro returned to her room, and resting the gun on a window-sill, fired again, and the negro dropped. He soon rose, however, and fled.

WINS TWO ISLANDS.

Private Concern Beats U. S. in Ownership Contest.

Washington, April 21.—The plans of the government for the improvement of the Saint Ste. Marie canal were upset in a measure yesterday when the supreme court affirmed the judgment of the lower courts, awarding to the Chandler-Donnan Water Power company title to two small islands in the rapids. These islands are only about an acre in extent, and little more than piles of rocks just above the water, but they are valuable for the water power privileges.

The government contended the sale of the lands was void as the islands have been reserved for public purposes of the United States. The court held, however, the company's title was good under Michigan law, the land under the water and the islands going with the shore land.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—That the Senate will at an early date pass the house bill to restore the motto, "In God We Trust," to the coins, is the assurance given to Representative Ollie James, of Kentucky, who had a conference with senators yesterday. The bill is pending in committee on the Senate side.

Petitions and letters for restoring the motto, which the president sought to abolish, are pouring in on the senators. While the House has acted, they have not ceased to come to House members. Mr. James said yesterday he had 25,000 letters and petitions in his office sent from various points of the United States.

They met the boys while on their way to Springfield, and all went to the theatre. The boys then went to Springfield with them, and on the way proposed that all get married. A license was secured, and a Springfield clergyman tied the knots, each couple in turn standing as witnesses and attendants while the other was being declared man and wife.

BIG SPELLING BEE.

Plans for a National Contest in Cleveland in June.

Chicago, April 21.—Pupils of Chicago grammar schools have been invited to attend a "national spelling bee" to be held in Cleveland during the latter part of June. The unique event has been arranged for by the executive committee of the forty-sixth annual convention of the National Educational association, which will be held in Cleveland for five days, beginning on June 25. The invitation received by Superintendent of Schools Cooley says the spelling contest is designed to stimulate interest in spelling among school children throughout the country, and the invitation to participate is open to the schools of every city in the United States.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY BILL MUST BE PASSED AGAIN.

In Its Present Form It Is Unconstitutional and Congress Has Bungled.

Washington, April 21.—Congress has blundered in passing the employers' liability bill. Either by ignorance or design it has passed a bill that is unconstitutional and will have to patch up its work or let the legislation lapse. When the bill was sent to the president he was told it would not stand test in the courts and he sent it to Attorney-General Bonaparte for a careful inquiry as to its constitutionality.

Now Mr. Bonaparte has ruled that it is unconstitutional, for the reason that it is applied to railroads alone and leaves other common carriers exempt, thus being discriminatory against the railroads.

The president will send it back to Congress and ask the leaders to fix it up, and this will be done, though various members would gladly kill it. At the time the bill passed, various lawyers were suspicious of it. This is the second employers' liability bill passed by Congress that has been invalid.

Minority Leader Williams Berates Speaker For Arbitrary

ADJOURNMENT OF HOUSE

Says Action Was Despotism—Denounces It as Bold Violation of Constitutional Right—Personal Friendship Remains Unbroken, However.

Washington, April 21.—Gaining the floor by unanimous consent, to speak to a question of privilege, Mr. Williams, minority leader of the House, yesterday directed attention to what he called the speaker's breadth of the privileges of the House in arbitrarily adjourning the House last Saturday, despite his vigorous protest. He would make all allowance, he said, for the "pestering" with which he had inflicted the speaker, and for human nature becoming intolerant, at being so pestered; but at the same time, he declared, the speaker's act was one of the gravest things that had occurred in parliamentary history.

"All talk," he said, "about a breach in the personal friendship existing between you and me, Mr. Speaker, growing out of what I regard as your arbitrary adjourning of the House is nonsense." "Real friendships," he said, "are too hard to form and to maintain, and too precious after they are formed, to be lightly shaken off by sensible men."

Mr. Williams then spoke of the constitutional rights of members to a vote by yeas and nays.

"The speaker's action is undeniable and is undertaken by him," he said. "The speaker cannot deny that it was his intent and purpose to cut off the right to demand the yeas and nays, and that this was the reason why he did not make the open ruling, but instead resorted to this unprecedented parliamentary act—by ignoring a demand and explaining subsequently through the press, when there was no House to appeal to nor to explain his purpose to."

Speaking in the most unimpassioned manner and carefully weighing his words, Mr. Williams added:

"The truth is, Mr. Speaker, that you are one of the best men in the world; but a long and undisturbed power, whose lesser abuses have been good naturedly passed over, has made you somewhat despotism and intolerant of position."

For some months, he said, members of the House and the press gallery had noticed that the speaker frequently made a jest of some official act—and no doubt the speaker thought he could so treat Saturday's incident. "But," he said, "the motive, purpose and effect of that action, which was unprecedented, unexpected and unannounced, was to destroy the very essence of representative government by annihilating the constitutionally guaranteed right of one-fifth of the House to place themselves on record in all cases."

Mr. Williams then offered the following resolution, which despite the protests of Mr. Payne, the speaker held to be privileged:

"Resolved, That the act of the speaker of the House of Representatives in adjourning the House on Saturday, April 18, 1908, was a breach of the privilege of the House affecting its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings."

FOUR-BATTLESHIP PLAN TURNED DOWN BY SENATOR

President Roosevelt Expected to Protest in Special Message.

Washington, April 21.—President Roosevelt's four-battleship program has been turned down by the Senate naval affairs committee. The committee has completed its report on the naval bill and makes provision for two big battleships—as did the House bill. Purchase of three colliers, in accordance with the Lodge amendment, is provided for. The building program of the House is but little changed.

An amendment is added to increase the pay of officers of the navy, and that of non-commissioned officers and enlisted men 10 per cent. The House provision for Pearl Harbor is retained.

It is expected President Roosevelt will send another message to the Senate insisting on four battleships more strongly than ever.

MOLLYCODDLE AGAIN.

Roosevelt Lauds Princeton at Harvard's Expense.

Washington, April 21.—Speaking to the members of the Princeton base ball team yesterday, President Roosevelt sharply criticized the athletic policy of Harvard, his alma mater, as represented by President Eliot and others high in the councils of the university.

Princeton men in Washington to play a game with Georgetown university, and they were introduced to the president by a member of Congress. Mr. Roosevelt chatted with them for some time on the subject of athletic sports, comparing the spirit at Princeton with that at Harvard, to the disadvantage of his alma mater. He reiterated substantially the view that to object to athletic sports, including foot ball, is to be a "mollycoddle." Someone at Cambridge, Mr. Roosevelt said, had written to him, asking his advice as to the athletic policy of Harvard university. He replied that his advice was that Harvard win more games.

Caracas, Venezuela, Saturday, April 18, via Willemstad, April 21.—The prevalence and continuance of a suspicious epidemic at La Guaira, which has caused a number of deaths, has decided some steamship companies not to admit passengers from that port, while others have resolved not to have their vessels call there at all.
